

EUR/USD back in the lower half of $1.15-1.16

Investor sentiment continued to be influenced by developments in the Middle East last week. Amid military attacks from both the US and Iran, and signs that peace talks have stalled, oil prices remained elevated. Brent crude oil operated in a range between circa $92-99 per barrel throughout the week. Against this backdrop, the Euro Stoxx 50 edged 0.2% higher, while the S&P 500 shed 2.6%.

On the data front, the main highlight was the US labour market report for May. Non-farm payrolls rose by 172k, well above the forecast of 85k. Furthermore, the April and March payrolls figures were revised higher. At the same time, the unemployment rate remained at 4.3%, while average earnings growth slowed to +3.4% y/y. In the Eurozone, the flash reading of HICP inflation increased to 3.2% in May, as expected. The core rate also rose to 2.3%, from 2.1%. Meanwhile, Eurozone GDP was revised lower to -0.2% q/q in Q1, from +0.1 q/q.

Currency-wise, the main pairs operated in relatively narrow ranges throughout most of the week. However, the dollar firmed markedly in the aftermath of the US payrolls data. The greenback gained circa 0.5 -1.0% against the euro, sterling and yen. A re-escalation in the conflict in the Middle East over the weekend has also supported the dollar in early morning trading today.

In level terms, EUR/USD is back in the lower half of $1.15-1.16. GBP/USD is down in the bottom half of $1.33-1.34. EUR/GBP is changing hands near the midpoint of 86-87p. Meantime, USD/JPY is above ¥160, a key level Japanese authorities have tried to defend recently.

This week, the spotlight will be on the ECB policy meeting. The ECB is widely expected to hike rates by 25bps. The focus will be on any guidance the bank offers. Meanwhile, US CPI inflation (May) and UK GDP (April) will be released. Investors will also be keeping an eye on developments in the Middle East.
