EUR/USD starts the week just above $1.03

A plethora of significant macroeconomic developments influenced financial markets last week. Most notably, the US decision to place tariffs on China, Canada and Mexico, and the subsequent delay to implement the tariffs on the latter pair, jolted markets at the start of the week. Risk appetite soured sharply on the original tariff decision, but recovered after the announcement of the delay, and following a muted retaliatory response from China.

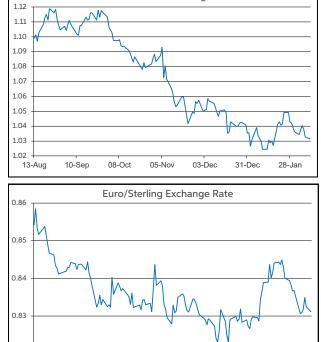

Elsewhere, the BoE cut rates by 25bps, in-line with expectations. However, there was a dovish tilt in the voting split, with two officials in favour of a 50bps cut (the other 7 all voted for 25bps). Although the MPC retains an easing bias, the overarching message is that the BoE will proceed carefully when setting policy, as the outlook is somewhat unclear given high levels of economic uncertainty. Meantime, the US labour market report for January was mixed, with payrolls printing below the consensus, while the unemployment rate fell and earnings growth accelerated.

Against this backdrop, there were significant gyrations on forex markets. EUR/USD traded in a wide $1.014-1.044 range, while GBP/USD operated between $1.225-1.255. At the same time, the action in EUR/GBP was contained between 82.4-83.8p. As trading gets underway this morning, EUR/USD is in the lower half of $1.03 -1.04, GBP/USD is just above $1.24 and EUR/GBP is in the bottom half of the 83-84p corridor. USD/JPY is below ¥152.

This week, a busy US data calendar includes updates on inflation, retail sales and industrial production for January. Chair Powell's testimony to Congress will also garner attention. Meantime in the UK, the first reading of Q4 GDP will be the highlight. Markets will also be digesting the latest weekend US tariff announcements. Daniel Noonan, Economist, AIB
