

Eurozone flash HICP inflation due today

In a similar pattern to last week, trading conditions remained relatively calm across financial markets yesterday. A somewhat quiet data calendar and a market holiday in the US contributed to muted price action. Against this backdrop, the Euro Stoxx 50 recouped some of its recent losses, rising by 0.3% yesterday.

Data-wise, the main highlight was the Eurozone unemployment rate for July. In-line with expectations, the bloc-wide jobless rate printed at an all-time low of 6.2%. Elsewhere, the final reading of the Eurozone manufacturing PMI for August was revised slightly higher to 50.7 from 50.5, while the UK equivalent was revised lower to 47.0 from 47.3. However, the data releases had no major impact on financial markets.

On the currency front, the main FX pairs continued to operate in narrow trading ranges throughout the day. Of the limited moves to note, the euro was under a touch of downward pressure. Meanwhile overnight, there was a weaker tone to the yen.

As trading gets underway this morning, the marginally softer euro is evidenced by EUR/GBP opening back in the lower half of the 86-87p corridor. EUR/USD is down below the $1.17 threshold also. Elsewhere, GBP/USD is changing hands in the bottom half of the $1.35-1.36 band. USD/JPY is up in the top half of the ¥147-148 range.

Turning to the day ahead, the main release will be the flash reading of Eurozone HICP inflation for August. The consensus is for the headline rate to print at 2.0% for a third consecutive month, while the core rate is forecast to edge down to 2.3% from 2.4%. In the US, the manufacturing ISM for August is projected to stay in contraction mode, albeit while improving slightly in the month. However, barring any major surprises, the data many not influence investor sentiment.
