

US trade tariffs take effect

There was a mixed mood on markets at the start of the week. The Euro Stoxx 50 gained 1.4%, led by a rally in defence companies, as European countries discussed increasing defence expenditure, as the US pulled military aid for Ukraine. Meantime, on Wall Street, the S&P 500 lost 1.8%, as planned US tariffs on Canadian, Mexican & Chinese goods took effect, and US data missed to the downside.

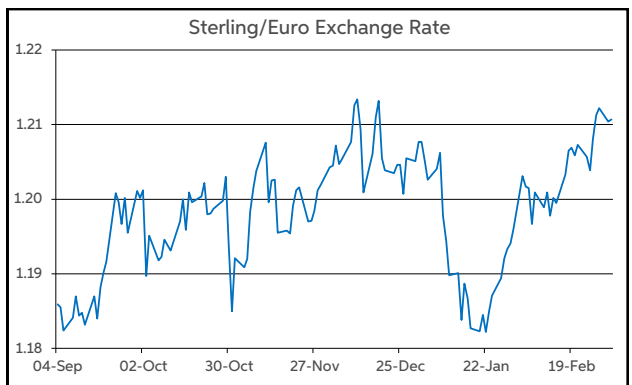

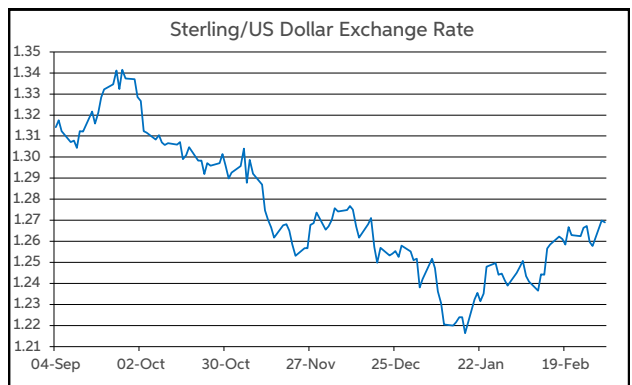

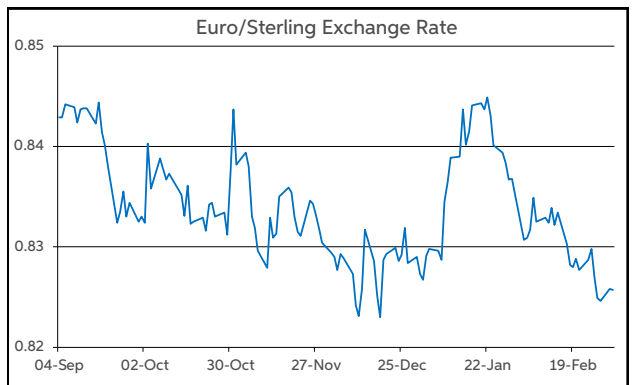

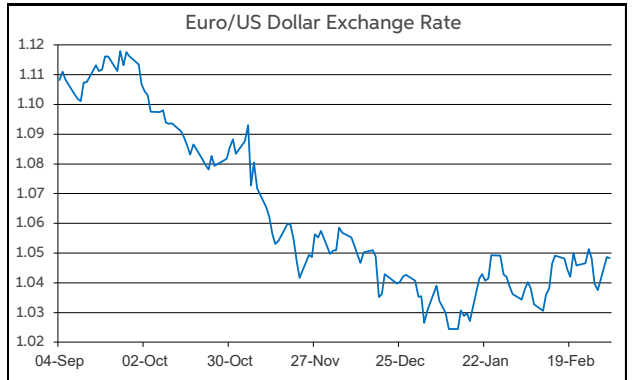

The US manufacturing ISM declined to 50.3 in February (vs. 50.8 f'cast), consistent with a modest pace of expansion in the sector. However, the underlying details of the survey showed that new orders contracted in the month, and that input costs jumped to their highest level since June 2022. Furthermore, the survey also suggest that the sector shed jobs in the month.

Elsewhere on the data front, the flash reading of Eurozone HICP inflation printed broadly in-line with expectations. The headline rate edged back to 2.4% in February (vs. 2.3% f'cast), while the core rate inched down to 2.6% from 2.7%. However, the market reaction to the release was limited.

Currency-wise, the dollar was under some downward pressure yesterday. Overall, the greenback declined by circa 0.7% versus the euro and sterling. This is evidenced by EUR/USD opening this morning in the top half of $1.04-1.05. GBP/USD is changing hands up near the $1.27 handle. Meanwhile, EUR/GBP continues to operate just north of the midpoint of the 82-83p band.

Today, the main data release will be the Eurozone unemployment rate for January. Meantime, President Trump is expected to outline his domestic and foreign-policy agenda in a speech to a joint session of Congress, which will be of keen interest to investors.
