

Chair Powell's testimony in focus today

There was a positive tone to risk appetite at the start of the week on financial markets. Despite the announcement of US tariffs on imports of steel and aluminium, and the threat of "reciprocal tariffs" on all countries who place levies on US exports over the weekend, equity markets moved higher on both sides of the Atlantic. The Euro Stoxx 50 gained 0.6%, while on Wall Street, the S&P moved 0.7% higher.

Currency-wise, the main pairs were tightly range bound throughout the European session. A sparse data schedule likely contributed to the lacklustre price action. The only release of note yesterday was the EU Sentix index for February. The survey ended a run of consecutive falls, improving to -12.7, its highest level since last July and well above expectations for a reading of -16.3. However, the release did not influence the euro.

Of the very limited moves to register on forex markets yesterday, sterling was under some downward pressure. However, there was no obvious catalyst for the decline. Meantime, in overnight action the dollar edged slightly higher across the board.

As trading gets underway this morning, EUR/USD opens back at the $1.03 threshold. GBP/USD is operating down nearer to the midpoint of the $1.23-1.24 corridor. Meanwhile, EUR/GBP is changing hands in the lower half of the 83-84p band.

Today, remarks from a number of central bank officials, including BoE Governor Bailey and fellow MPC member Mann, as well as the ECB's Schnabel will warrant attention. However, the main focus will be on comments from Fed Chair Powell, as he provides his semi-annual testimony to the US Senate Banking Committee.
