

Euro starts the week on the defensive

There was a risk off tone to investor sentiment throughout the European session, as investors continued to digest the impact of the EU parliamentary elections. Against this backdrop, the Euro Stoxx 50 declined by 0.7%, while 10-year sovereign yields rose by 6 -12bps in the Eurozone, led higher by the French OAT. Meantime, on Wall Street, the S&P 500 edged 0.3% higher, and US Treasury yields rose by a more modest 4bps.

Data-wise, there was a sparse macro calendar on both sides of the Atlantic. The only releases of note, the EU sentix index printed above the consensus, improving for an eighth consecutive month, and rising to 0.3 in June from -3.6. However, the release had little impact on the euro yesterday.

Indeed, the single currency remained on the back-foot, having suffered significant losses in APAC trading at the start of the week. The euro registered its lowest reading against sterling since August 2022, at 84.4p. Similarly, EUR/USD fell to a fresh four-week low of $1.073. However, the euro moved off its lows overnight.

In level terms, EUR/GBP opens this morning just above the midpoint of 84-85p. EUR/USD is operating in the top half of the $1.07-1.08 range. Elsewhere, GBP/USD is operating in the lower half of the $1.27-1.28 corridor.

Already today, UK labour market data for April have been released. The unemployment rate printed slightly above the consensus, rising to 4.4% (vs. 4.3% f'cast). Meanwhile, average earnings growth accelerated to +5.9% y/y in the 3-months to April (vs. +5.7% y/y f'cast). However, the data have not impacted sterling in early trading. Later today, US small business optimism for May is due.
