

Sterling on the front-foot

There was a mixed mood on markets yesterday, amid a relatively quiet start to the week. The Euro Stoxx 50 registered a 0.4% decline. In contrast, the S&P 500 rose by 0.4%. On bond markets, US Treasury and German Bund yields were little changed. Meantime, UK Gilt yields moved circa 3bps higher.

Data-wise, the flash PMIs for December were released. In the Eurozone, the manufacturing PMI remained deep in contraction territory but the services PMI unexpectedly returned to expansion. In the UK, the services PMI printed ahead of the consensus and stayed above 50, while the manufacturing sector deteriorated and was below 50. Similarly, the US services PMI beat expectations and was firmly in expansion mode, while the manufacturing PMI performed worse than anticipated and stayed in contraction.

Currency-wise, sterling was holding a slightly firmer tone yesterday following the release of the UK PMI data. Elsewhere on currency markets, the euro and the yen remained under some downward pressure. Against this backdrop, sterling gained circa 0.5% versus the euro. In level terms, this is evidenced by EUR/GBP opening today back below the 83p threshold. EUR/USD is at the $1.05 handle. GBP/USD is operating up in the top half of the $1.26-1.27 range. At the same time, USD/JPY is just north of ¥154.

Already this morning UK labour market data have been released. The unemployment rate remained at 4.3% in October. However, average earnings growth accelerated to +5.2% y/y (vs. +4.6% f'cast). Sterling has been a touch firmer in early trading following the release. Later today, a raft of US data including industrial production and retail sales for November are due.
